

CLINICAL CONNECTIONS

Illuminating Relevant Clinical Issues and Networking with Colleagues

The 1-2-3's for Treating Resistant Teens

1. What do you do with a snarling 13 year-old who sees you as the enemy?
2. How do you reach an indifferent high schooler who just sees you as a tool of mom and dad?
3. Why would a teenager every want to have fun working with you?
4. When should you use a zirconium hydride neutron moderator as a fuel source when building a modern day nuclear reactor?

Three of the four questions above will be explored in this fun, informative and interactive workshop.

Friday, Sept. 25, 2009

from 7:00 to 8:30 pm

Room C

Pepperdine University – Encino Campus

Kent Toussaint, M.A. is a licensed Marriage and Family Therapist who specializes in helping kids, teens and their families live happier lives. A large part of Kent's practice is working with and breaking through the resistance that many teenagers (and parents) bring to therapy. For more information about Kent Toussaint, please visit www.KentToussaint.com.

RSVP to Alice.Richardson@Pepperdine.edu

For more information call Alice Richardson (818) 501-1619

Sponsored by Pepperdine University's Clinical Training and Professional Development Office

Clinical Connections is an exciting, free networking opportunity for Licensed and Pre-Licensed M.F.T.'s and Psy.D.'s from different universities to connect. It will offer a forum to discuss clinical issues with colleagues, learn from other's experiences, and to gain support and insight.

We hope that you join us!