How to Find a Job as a MFT Intern

Obtaining hours towards licensure and earning a living can be challenging and appear impossible. There are many paid opportunities often missed by interns. While private practice is one of the ways to flourish, students need to pay attention to the many community, county, and state intern and paid positions in need of master's level employees with a clinical education. In this workshop, the essentials needed to succeed as an intern and where to look for a job to expedite the internship process so that hours accumulate and clinical skills increase will be examined.
