Moshe Ben-Yosef is a licensed Marriage and Family Therapist in private practice, with office locations in Los Angeles and the San Gabriel Valley. He earned his Masters in Clinical Psychology from Pepperdine University. Moshe specializes in working with individuals suffering from childhood trauma and HIV. He also works with the GLBTQQI community regarding a variety of concerns and struggles, such as gender identity and issues related to sexuality and religion. He has experience conducting therapy with children, adolescents, adults (including the geriatric population), couples and families. Moshe has worked in private and non-profit facilities, and has provided therapy in outpatient, inpatient and community based settings. In addition to his private practice, Moshe writes for Rentfoodbroke.com under the moniker AdviceBum.
